

$100 Given to Mark Hannah Cole's Grave

County Court Makes Appropriation
Tuesday at Request of Mrs.
Rust and Mrs. Stites

The county court, at the request of Mrs. Marshall Rust and Mrs. Jack Stites, of Pilot Grove, Tuesday appropriated $100 from the general county fund to secure a marker for the grave of Hannah Cole, pioneer mother and first white woman to settle in Cooper county, who lies buried in Briscoe cemetery near Bell Air.

The appropriation will also be used to build a fence around the cemetery and to provide general maintenance of the burying ground. The move is a commendable one, for it will mark permanently the resting place of one of the most unusual women the West produced. The efforts of Col. J. B. Barnes in behalf of the history of this woman and the ultimate discovery of her grave doubtless were incentives to Mrs. Rust and Mrs. Stites, members of the Pilot Grove Chapter, D. A. R., to petition the county court for the funds.

Car Here

"It's on its way," says John Kralovec of the Esser Motor Co., in regard to the Dodge Eight Mileage Marathon, which has just started. The Dodge Eight will be driven back and forth from coast to coast until it wears out. "This is one of the most grueling of tests for this great car," Mr. Kralovec stated, "and we want everyone in this community to come into our place of business and learn more about this car and the big Marathon. The Esser Motor Co. has a gift of interest to people of this section, and requests and urges a visit soon. "Not only is much interest being shown in the Dodge Marathon, but the nation-wide Plymouth contest is creating much talk. Many here have entered the "Why I'd Buy a Plymouth Contest," but according to Mr. Kralovec, "interested persons should come in at 500 Main Street, and learn more of it."
