A few years of this newspaper "survived" to be microfilmed.

What follows are genealogical excerpts from those papers.

Dates of the newspapers serve as division points. The paper was published on Thursday.

In obits, I have omitted extraneous comments that do not contribute genealogical info.

Mrs. C. H. Tatro was called to Kansas City last Sunday because of the death of her sister, Mrs. Hudson.

Six officers were killed late Saturday afternoon when they went to the home of Mrs. J. D. Young, near Springfield, to attempt to arrest Harry Young, who had been a fugitive from justice for more than 2 years, being charged with the murder of Marshall Noe of Republic. Officers killed by Young and his confederates were: Sheriff Marcell Hendrix of Greene County; Deputy Sheriff Wiley Mashburn; Detective Chief Tony Oliver; City Detective Ollie Crosswhite; City Detective Sidney Meadows; Police Patrol Drive Charles Houser; all of Springfield. The officers were mowed down by rapid gun fire as they opened the door of the Young home. They had received a tip that Harry Young was there, having come in from Houston, Texas. Although a large posse led by officers from Springfield, surrounded the house early in the evening the men inside escaped after the terrible slaughter. It was not definitely known how many men were with Young, but there was his brother, Jennings, probably another brother, Paul, and others. The two brothers, Harry and Jennings Young, were trailed to Houston, Texas, they having slipped into Springfield after dark Saturday night and stole a car in which to make their escape. This car was wrecked at Streetman, Texas, but the two men hailed another car and continued their flight. Tuesday morning the two men were trapped by officers in a cottage on the outskirts of Houston and rather than be taken alive, they shot each other, the officers find Jennings dead and Harry mortally wounded when they entered the room. The latter died an hour later. They had rented the room Monday evening from J. F. Tomlinson, a carpenter, who recognized the slayers from their pictures which he had seen in the papers. He took his family to a neighbor's that night and the next morning notified the police.

With a companion, Mr. Mears was hunting when their dogs treed what they thought to be a 'possum under a small ledge. Mears leaned his shotgun against the edge of the ledge and was probing for the varmint when one of the dogs ran against the gun. Mears grabbed for the gun as it fell and was discharged. The charge struck him in the left forearm. The arm was badly mangled and the wound likely would have proven fatal but for the thoughtfulness of Mr. Mears in binding his arm tightly with a shoe string to prevent the loss of blood.---

January 21, 1932:

In the days of the open saloon we heard "oldtimers" bemoan the fact that they could get no pure whiskey like they used to have when they could go to the still and buy it. Many were the stories told of how the saloon keeper adulterated his liquor, and of tobacco and other things being found in the bottom of the whiskey barrel. Today "oldtimers" who get their intoxicants from the moonshiner's still are bemoaning the fact that they can get no pure whiskey like they had in the saloon days. After all it is pretty hard to get "pure" poison at any time or any place.

Thwarted by the "rabbit's foot" that apparently guards the Bank of Rogersville, Si Russell, 29, and Roy Coots, 21, his nephew, were in the Webster County jail at Marshfield Tuesday awaiting arraignment on bank robbery charges. Within 7 hours after holding up the bank Monday and making away with $800, both men charged with the crime were under arrest and the money had been recovered and returned to bank officials. For the second time in 2 years, robbery of the Rogersville bank was disastrous to the men who attempted it. R. R. David was shot and killed by a posse, and Leroy Burdick is serving a penitentiary sentence as a result of a robbery there Jan. 10, 1930. Russell was caught with the money at the home of his brother 8 miles northeast of Rogersville at 8 o'clock Monday night, after officers had picked up Coots on suspicion and learned that he lived with Fred Russell, brother of Si. Coots was sent on to Marshfield jail and Sheriff John M. Poynor went to the brother's home. Si Russell had fled, but returned after he thought the Sheriff had gone, only to be surprised by Poynor, waiting in a dark room. When search revealed the stolen money, he confessed the sheriff said. Confronted with his uncle's confession, Coots confessed at Marshfield Monday night, officers said. He had been overtaken by officers while walking on the old Marshfield road 5 miles north of Rogersville, at 5 o'clock Monday. The robbery occurred at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, 5 minutes after the cashier had gone to lunch, leaving Miss Lillian Edie, assistant, alone. Two men in overalls, jumpers and spectacles entered, ordered her to scoop up the money while they kept their hands in their pockets as if they had guns, then locked her in the vault. The men apparently had been on foot, Sheriff Poynor said.

The produce house and lumber yard of L. C. Gregory was destroyed by fire early Friday morning, the fire being first discovered a little before 2 o'clock by Murf Chandler who meets the night trains to take care of the mail. The alarm was quickly sounded and soon a number had gathered on the scene to render whatever assistance they could. It was only by heroic work on the part of the volunteer fire fighters that the residence of J. A. Randall just north of the burning building was saved. The Mountain Grove fire department was called and rendered valuable assistance in the work of saving the Randall home. Most of the furnishings in the home were carried out as it seemed for a time that it would be impossible to save the building. A strong north wind and the fact that we had had a heavy rain Thursday and Thursday night aided greatly in saving other nearby buildings. All the contents of the burned building were destroyed, Mr. Gregory estimating his loss at $4,000 with $2,500 insurance. The building belonged to Randall & Ellis and was insured for $1,000. We understand they do not intend to rebuild. Mr. Gregory has not been able to secure a building in which to continue his business and will probably erect a building as soon as he can secure a suitable location. Some records and warrant books of Norwood special road district were destroyed in the fire. The cause of the fire is not known.

The men who are clamoring for a wet plank in the Republican platform are not interested in the success of the party but only in the election of a wet for president. They figure that the Democratic candidate and platform will be wet and that with a wet plank or even a resubmission plank in the Republican platform a Democratic victory will be assured as millions of dry Republicans will not follow their party into the wet camp. Mr. Hoover's only chance of re-election lies in his standing pat for prohibition.

Last Wednesday morning about 5:15 when W. H. Fraley, janitor of the First National Bank at Mountain Grove, went down to the bank to make a fire he found a bandit who had broken out a rear window to gain admission, awaiting his arrival. The bandit drew a .44 revolver on Mr. Fraley and made him throw up his hands. He was allowed to go ahead and make his fire with the man following him around with the gun. On being questioned about the affairs of the bank, Mr. Fraley informed the man that the safe would not open until 9:00 o'clock, and he also stated that he was subject to attacks of heart trouble and that if he remained away from home more than 40 minutes his family would be down there looking for him. Seeing that this line of talk made the bandit uneasy he continued to tell him of the danger of trying to carry out his play of robbing the bank at that time. The bandit decided to make his getaway but forced the janitor to accompany him. He forced Mr. Fraley to get into his car which was parked west of Hotel Elliott. He then drove south on the south market road and did not let Mr. Fraley out of the car until they were beyond the Goodville store. He walked back to the store and the merchant, Arthur McLean, took him back to Mountain Grove. Mr. Fraley described his abductor as a young man, probably 22 to 25 years old, about 5 feet and 8 inches in height, round face, plump build and weighing about 150 pounds.

While installing a telephone at the J. S. Raney home northwest of town, Fay Wells, 22 years old, was instantly killed when a wire he was handling came in contact with a high powered wire of the Missouri Electric Power Co., Saturday morning at 11:15 o'clock. Young Wells was standing on a step ladder in the rear of his truck, the ladder leaning against the house, when the wire he was handling caught on a limb of a tree. He attempted to loosen the wire by throwing it, and evidently misjudged the distance to the 33,000 volt electric wire, the phone wire coming in contact with it. Wells was knocked from the ladder by the shock and death was probably instantaneous. Dr. VanNoy was called but death had resulted before his arrival. Dr. Ryan was called from Mountain Grove and an ambulance was also called, it being thought life might be restored by rushing the victim to a pulmotor at Springfield. However, after examination, the doctors decided it was not use and he was not taken. Mr. Wells' home was at Clarence, Mo., and the body was taken to the home of his parents there Saturday afternoon and funeral services were held there Monday, most of the office force from the telephone company at Mountain Grove attending. He was the only child of his parents and his death comes as a great shock to them. The accident caused considerable trouble at the switchboard in Norwood and one phone on the line was burned out. A shower of rain had fallen a short time before and the ladder and truck being damp is thought to have made the shock much worse than it would otherwise have been.

July 7, 1932:

A strange tale is told of the 1875 "locust plague." In the latter days of May, when the pests appeared at the height of their destructive orgy, Governor Hardin of Missouri issued a proclamation, dated May 31, 1875, appointing June 3 as a day of fasting and prayer, to be observed by all people of the state. The proclamation was generally observed, not only in Missouri, but in Kansas. The Kansas City Times of that morning said editorially: "We hope that every man who fails to attend church today will find himself a goodly sum and honestly pay over the money to the relief committee." While the people assembled in the churches and the homes, prayed, the army of grasshoppers whatever the cause, really did take wing and fly back to the Northwest from whence they came. Before the night of June 3, the day of prayer, they were, in fact, all gone. Editorially, on the morning of June 4, The Times commented upon the phenomenon and said: "The grasshoppers have departed. All day yesterday the face of the sun was almost veiled by the swarms of the departing locusts. Their sunlit wings looked like falling snow-flakes and were visible as far upward as the eye could reach. At times, they seemed to be flying hither and thither as if seeking their places and waiting their orders in a great forward movement, but the general direction appeared to be toward the northwest." July 14, 1932:

A funeral was being held in a country church and the preacher was telling, one by one, the character elements of the deceased. He was represented as a devoted husband, a loving father, a good citizen and a devoted church member. Just before the preacher reached the climax in having the man in the casket walk home to God, an unshaved man, clad in overalls, arose from his seat in the back of the church and deliberately stalked down the aisle toward the stand. The preacher thinking that he had left something unsaid that should have been spoken, paused in his oration and said to the man as he peered into the face of the dead: "Friend, is there anything special that you wanted to say?" "Naw," replied the man, "I decided from what you said we were burying the wrong man and I wanted to see for myself."

Some folks may be fooled by the fight being made on prohibition on the grounds that it means poisonous moonshine and increased crime, but O. C. Gatrell of Belle Plaine, Ia., writing as follows in Liberty Magazine, isn't one of them: "In the old days we had to pay a heavy tax on whiskey. To get by that, we would take 10 pounds of prunes, some strychnine, ether, logwood and licorice and make from 5 to 6 barrels from the one barrel purchased, bottle it, and sell it for good Old Crow at 35 cents per one-half pint and 50 cents per pint. It killed just as quick as the rotgut you fellows drink today. In the old days, if a man got rough and got bumped off in our saloon, we threw him in the alley, called the cops, to whom we whispered the sad story, after giving them a drink and probably a five-spot. The cops would haul him away, and nothing more was every heard about it. Today, if a baby is kidnapped or a man stubs his toe, it is blamed on prohibition."

Whenever Sherman Hammack wants chicken for dinner, he drives out into the country, locates a promising looking flock, steps on the gas and spears a fat hen with the handle of the car door. Or at least that is the way he did it last Thursday afternoon. He had driven Dr. VanNoy's car out to Coon Ball's and while near the Ball home ran into a bunch of chickens, but was not aware that any of them had been hit. However, when he returned to town and stepped from the car there was a hen stuck onto the handle of the right hand door, the handle having pierced her back.

Under the heading "Do You Know Missouri?", the Kansas City Journal Post has been running each day a description and historical sketch one county in the state. Below we give that of Wright County: Did you know that the Battle of Hartville occurred in Wright County, Mo., and that this encounter was one of the principal events of the Civil War in Missouri? The residents were divided in sentiment, at this time, and in 1862 the Unionists burned Hartville and "Lige Mack" and his followers burned the remain buildings. Did you know that the famous Macomb train robbery trial was in Wright County? Did you know that in 1880 the county was wrecked by the cyclone that did much damage throughout all of southeastern Missouri? In 1888 another tornado struck the county, and in 1885 crops were damaged by flood waters. Wright lies on the northern slope of the Ozarks. It contains 432,000 acres. The Gasconade River flows north through it. There are many good springs, and led, zinc, silver and copper have been found--some in paying quantities and some in lesser quantities. Fruit grows well here and some grain is exported. Cotton is raised in Wright, and cattle, horses and mules are shipped to outstate markets. In 1898 11,000 acres of land in Wright County was thrown open to settlement. The first settlers had arrived in 1832 and the county was organized January 29, 1841 and named for Silas Wright of New York. Hartville was made the county seat and has always remained so. When first settled, the county was referred to as the "land of honey" because so much wild honey was found.---Hester Burgess Miller

Elmer Raney suffered painful and serious injury to his hand and forearm Tuesday evening of last week when he slipped and fell while carrying a five gallon jar in one hand and a lard can in the other. The accident happened at the home of his father-in-law, T. R. Richardson, east of town. Mr. Raney was bringing the jar and can in from his car and the fall occurred when he stepped upon an icy place where a rain barrel had been setting at the corner of the house. The barrel had been removed that day to be used in butchering hogs. The jar was broken and in some manner nearly all the flesh was cut from the inside of Mr. Raney's hand by a piece of the broken stoneware. Dr. VanNoy had to take 3 stitches on the inside and two on the back of the injured hand.
